

CONSENT TO THE PROCESSING OF PERSONAL DATA
“Publishing photos from events on social media”

As a parent of the data subject who is under the age of 16 years, I hereby declare that I explicitly give my consent to process personal data of my child.

At the same time, I confirm that the consent to process personal data of my child is a freely given, specific, informed, unambiguous indication of my and my child’s wishes, and prior to giving consent I have familiarised myself and my child to the extent possible and beneficial with the following information:

Which personal data are being processed?

If you, as a parent of the child, give this consent, the controller may process photograph and/or audio-visual images of your child.

What is the purpose of processing and its legal basis?

We will process the personal data of your child by taking photographs and audio-visual recordings, which are used for the purpose of promotion of our events and services and to help us improve our brand and goodwill by publishing the photographs (where it is possible that your child will appear) and audio-visual recordings on our social media profiles such as YouTube, LinkedIn, Facebook, Twitter and Instagram, as well as via other channels such as our websites.

Since your child is under the age of 16 years, such processing can only be processed if you, as the parent, have given your consent. The legal basis of personal data processing is your freely given consent on behalf of your child. The consent is given voluntarily, therefore if you do not wish to have such personal data of your child processed, you do not have to give this consent.

What rights do data subjects have regarding the processing of their personal data?

You need to be aware that the exact terms of exercising individual rights are regulated in Chapter III of the Directive and might not be applicable in each specific situation.

- The right to access
- The right to rectification
- The right to erasure
- The right to the limitation of processing operations
- The right to personal data portability
- The right to withdraw consent
- The right to lodge a complaint with a supervisory authority

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION REGARDING THE CONSENT TO PROCESS PERSONAL DATA

Who will the personal data be provided to?

The personal information of data subjects is subject to strict protection by the controller. The controller shall not use the data subject's personal data for purposes other than those specified above. When using the data for these purposes, the controller can only provide the data subject's personal data to verified suppliers of technologies, IT and marketing services used by the controller, and only within the scope necessary to fulfil their contractual obligations towards the controller and if due protection of the personal data is ensured.

How does the controller handle the personal data of data subjects?

Whereas, for the controller, the protection and care of the data subject's personal data is of the utmost importance, the controller has adopted suitable security measures to protect the data subject's personal data from destruction, loss, unauthorised disclosure and other inadmissible forms of processing. Such measures involve, in particular, the use of encryption, hashing and recording techniques, the application of pseudonymisation or the anonymisation of data (if possible), as well as the ability to ensure the ongoing confidentiality, integrity and resilience of processing systems and the use of a process for regularly testing, assessing and evaluating the effectiveness of technical and organisational measures for ensuring the security of personal data.

Your personal data are being processed exclusively in the territory of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and other member states of the European Union. Your personal data may be processed in a country outside the European Union only if the European Committee has confirmed that this country provides an adequate level of personal data protection, or if other appropriate safeguards to protect personal data exist (e.g., binding corporate rules or standard EU contractual clauses on personal data protection).

How long do you process personal data of my child?

The controller processes the personal data of data subjects only for the period of validity of their consent. If data storage is no longer necessary to achieve the purpose of the processing, the controller will no longer store such data and will delete the data once their purpose has been served.

What rights do data subjects (or their parents) have in the processing of personal data?

The rights of the data subject with regard to his/her personal data are specified below. If the data subject wishes to exercise his/her rights or wants to obtain more information about them, he/she can contact the controller using the contact details provided below. You need to be aware that the exact terms of exercising the individual rights are regulated in Chapter III of the Directive, and they might not be applicable in each specific situation.

When someone wishes to exercise his/her rights, the controller may first demand additional information to confirm the identity of the person exercising such rights.

- The right to access
The data subject shall have the right to access information about his/her personal data that is processed by the controller. Should the data subject have any questions pertaining to processing (e.g., its purpose, the categories of data being processed, the retention period, their rights, etc.), he/she can contact the controller using the contact information provided below.
- The right to rectification
The data subject shall have the right to request from the controller, without undue delay, the rectification of inaccurate personal data concerning himself/herself. The data subject shall also have the right to have incomplete personal data completed, including by means of providing a supplementary statement.
- The right to erasure
The data subject shall have the right to request from the controller permanent erasure of his/her personal data. The data subject may exercise this right, for example, when he/she assumes that the personal data is no longer necessary for the purpose for which they were collected or following a withdrawal of the consent to process personal data.
- The right to the limitation of processing operations
The data subject shall have the right to request from the controller a limitation of personal data processing activities, for example, when the controller no longer needs the personal data but they are needed by the data subject for legal purposes.

- The right to personal data portability
The data subject shall have the right to receive the personal data concerning himself/herself in a structured, commonly used and machine-readable format and to have the data transmitted to another controller. It should be noted that the data subject shall have the right to transmit personal data to another controller only if it is technically feasible. Due to the specific technology through which the data subject's data are processed, the controller is unable, in general, to transfer some data outside the given technical system.
- The right to lodge a complaint with a supervisory authority
Should the data subject wish to lodge a complaint related to the processing of personal data by the controller, he/she may lodge a formal complaint with a supervisory authority. You can find your local supervisory authority at:

How can a data subject withdraw his/her consent?

The data subject shall have the right to withdraw his/her consent at any time during its validity using the URL sent to him/her when granting the consent.

The withdrawal of the consent shall not affect the lawfulness of personal data processing based on the consent given prior to its withdrawal.
